Factor members -- help me reply to this one please
Does anyone know if trailing stops can be used with IBKR?
 I do not use automatic trailing stops. On TradeNav I could use, but don't.
 See attached order template

 Peter, I enter each GTC Stop Buy Order, with its associated Limit Take Profit and Stop-Loss orders. But sometimes, I would like to take profit on half the position with a GTC Trailing Stop order. Do you know how to do that on TWS IBKR? New trail orders may expose me to overfill.

 So there is a bit of trial and error before being fully confident with IB TRAIL orders in my view. Good for swing trading but not for position trades

 I use them. Instead of entering a stop order "STP" use trailing Stop "TRAIL". I noticed you need to enter the amount of trail (which is the distance from next available market price). Afterwards when HOD reaches the increment trail amount the stop is THEN adjusted up.

 Yes, I use them sometimes. I'm not sure if you can attach them to the original order though. I've always had to attach a normal stop order, then create a new trailing stop order after the original limit order is filled.

 Thank you. To clarify, the PT and SL orders are grouped her with 3288. Easy to add a 3rd ungrouped Trailing Stop order. But if either the PT or the SL orders trigger, I may have an orphan trailing stop order lying around. This is potentially opening an unwanted fresh short.

Canadian Dollars. I established a 50% position (40 BP risk) and have split this into two tranches. Profits have been taken on one tranche at .7459.

Check out my #ETHUSD analysis on @TradingView:

ETH. I view the chart as bearish and established a short today. The upside attempt to complete a running wedge failed, mkt broke back into pattern and then retested the underside of the upper boundary line. Risk is to Thursday's high
